

Summary

Acknowledgements

1. Introduction: Research Questions and Analytical Framework

Section 1: Transformation of the Cold War Structure and Japanese Diplomacy in the 1960s

Section 2: Categorization of Two Order Frameworks and Leaders

2. Chapter 1: Resistance and the Failed Isolation of China: The Ikeda Administration's Policies Toward China, 1960-1964

Section 1: Willingness to Deal with the China Problems

Section 2: Running in Opposite Directions: Japan and the United States on their policies toward China and the Soviet Union

Section 3: Rise of the Sino-US Confrontation and the Collapse of Ikeda Diplomacy

3. Chapter 2: Adaptation to, and Discord with, US-Soviet Cooperation: Japanese Policy toward China in the Early Sato Administration 1964-1968

Section 1: Sato Eisaku's Personality in His Policy toward China

Section 2: Sino-US Conflicts and the Formation of the Japan-US-USSR Affiliation

Section 3: Debate over the Isolation of China

4. Chapter 3: Sino-US Rapprochement and the Japanese Diplomatic Choice – The Sato and Tanaka Administrations and the Normalization of Sino-Japanese Diplomatic Relations 1969-1972

Section 1: Emergence of US-China-Soviet Triple Axis and Alienation of the Sato Administration

Section 2: Sino-US Rapprochement and Sato's Diplomatic Guidance

Section 3: Sino-Japanese Diplomatic Normalization and Anti-Soviet Resonance

5. Last Chapter: “Cold War” and “Asian Order”

Index